Khadr plea deal in works

◆ Gitmo war-crimes trial delayed again ◆ Khadr's Canadian lawyers confirm deal is being explored
 ◆ Cannon denies talk of serving sentence in Canada

The resumption of Omar Khadr's much-delayed war-crimes trial was pushed back another week Thursday amid discussions that would see him plead guilty, apparently in exchange for serving most of his sentence in Canada.

Khadr's Pentagon-appointed lawyer, Lt.-Col. Jon Jackson, confirmed the trial of Guantanamo Bay's youngest inmate would now resume Oct. 25 rather than Monday as scheduled. Jackson refused to comment on the plea talks.

However, one of Khadr's Canadian lawyers confirmed defence and prosecution were deep in discussions to avoid a trial, but denied a deal had already been reached.

"As of now, there's no deal," Nate Whitling said from Edmonton. "The two sides are talking. We're hoping for a potential deal." Whitling refused to discuss any details of the talks.

"We'd like to resolve this thing and get Omar out of Guantanamo," he said.

Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon's office also said there was no deal

Ongoing saga

The last-minute manoeuvrings came as Omar Khadr's controversial military commission trial was set to resume Monday in Guantanamo Bay.

- The hearing, which began in August after years of delays, was abruptly halted on its first day when Khadr's U.S. military lawyer, Lt.-Col. Jon Jackson, fell ill in the courtroom.
- Quoting sources "close to the trial," news agency Al-Arabiya said Thursday a plea deal had been reached. The report said the agreement would "assure the U.S. government a conviction" and "ensure Khadr return to Canada to serve the majority of his sentence."

with the United States to return Khadr to Canada.

"Omar Khadr is facing serious charges in the U.S.," Cannon's office said in a statement. "These serious charges would have to be addressed in the U.S."

Doucet champions arts, culture in city

◆ Candidate puts arts and culture, social housing, and environment on par with enlightened plans for transit, good governance

It's been 40 years since an Ottawa resident has won an Oscar award.

But a mayoral candidate wants to make the little guy feel welcome in the nation's capital.

"Filmmaking is a perfect example of what worked in the past and what can work in the future," said Clive Doucet. "We have marvelously talented filmmakers ... who want to make Ottawa their home for their families and their professional lives."

The city needs to change its priorities to support culture and the arts, said Doucet.

"We need a capital budget for ... rehearsal halls, studios and performance spaces. Every world capital has a capital budget for cultural spaces. We have none."

The city also needs to establish a proper Ottawa art gallery, and while Ottawa needs its own film festival,

"We have been led by managers, not mayors who have an integrated plan for the many problems that we are facing in the 21st century."

MAYORAL CANDIDATE CLIVE DOUCET

it needs a system of funding, he said.

Ottawa needs to develop a plan so that when the opportunity comes forward, "you can grab it and run with it," he said.

Each budget is the same, said Doucet. "We regularly go after the arts and we regularly see artists and performers coming forward, saying, 'Don't cut our budget.'

"Imagine a mayor ... that changed its priorities to create possibilities instead of constraints.

"This is what all great cities of the world do."

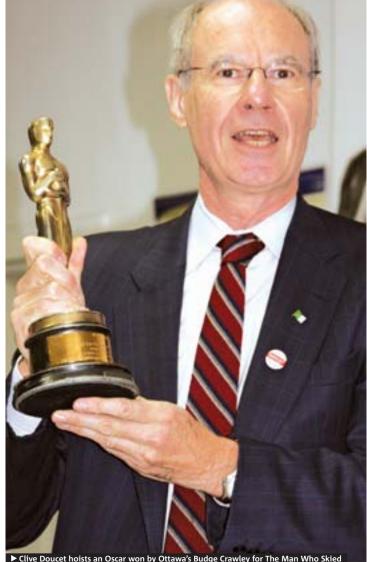

TRACEY TONG

Also on agenda

Doucet also focused on social housing, the environment and light rail Thursday.

- ► There is only one way to develop successful social housing, Doucet said and that is to create landuse policies that will throw a steady stream of affordable housing into the market.
- Doucet said the city is moving towards fewer people

- occupying a growing territory. "There are less people per capita, per square metre, than there were 50 or 60 years ago," he said.
- ► The city must move to light rail that is self-sustaining financially and environmentally, encourage bicycles, and set an example in how we use our water.
- It must also change the way it builds and locates buildings to account for the rise in temperatures.

▶ Clive Doucet hoists an Oscar won by Ottawa's Budge Crawley for The Man Who Skied Down Mount Everest at his last announcement before the election Thursday. "This Oscar was earned by the creativity, artistic talent and expertise of people who worked right here in our city ... They were all local boys ...This was an Oscar made right here in this city."

Where do they stand on taxes and democracy?

The Canadian Taxpayers Federation has released the results of its survey of Ottawa's mayoral candidates.

The federal lobby group asked the four perceived front-runners the same five questions on taxes and democratic reform.

"There were generally two clusters of candidates," said Derek Fildebrant, the CTF's national research director.

"Larry O'Brien and Andrew Haydon, while different, were on the same broad side of the ledger as being more concerned about taxes than perhaps the other two candidates demonstrated."

Nailing down Watson and Doucet's positions on the issues, Fildebrant said, was a bit of a challenge because Doucet answered through a spokesperson, and the Watson campaign refused to participate at all.

"I cannot speak on behalf of (the Watson) campaign," he said, "But it's often a political tactic that if you don't like the questions being asked, don't answer them."

The survey exposed some differences between the candidates who did answer. Both Haydon and Doucet, for example, said they would be willing to disclose the names of their campaign donors and amounts given, while O'Brien said he would only do so if the rules required it of all candidates.

Question Period

The five questions the CTF asked Ottawa's mayoral candidates:

- Do you support limiting annual property tax bill increases to Ottawa's inflation rate?
- Do you support requiring referendums for any new tax or tax increase beyond Ottawa's inflation rate?
- Will you lobby the provincial government to allow Ontario municipalities to put in place "recall" mechanisms for elected officials?
- Do you support structural reform of the City of Ottawa to give local communities more control over their affairs using a "borough model"?
- Will you proactively disclose publicly a list of who contributed to your campaign and in what amount prior to the Oct. 25 vote?

Ottawa medical students and practitioners can hone their skills on virtual patients in Canada's largest medical simulation centre

The University of Ottawa Skills and Simulation Cen-(uOSSC) officially opened Thursday at the Ottawa Hospital's Civic Cam-

The centre houses a wide range of simulation tools, including anatomically correct plastic models of body parts and full-body mannequins that breathe, exhibit vital signs and respond accurately to medications, fluids and chest compressions.

"Many professions use simulation or simulators as a method of training," said Viren Naik, the centre's medical director. "Most obvious is the airline industry, where I guess most people would be pretty reluctant to get into a plane where a pilot hasn't spent many hours in a simulator."

Dr. Wade Gofton, an orthopedic surgeon, said that starting on simulators is preferable to traditional teaching of medical students by having them join in on actual medical procedures in the operating room.

'This far improves efficiency in learning and also in our belief increases patient safety. They're well trained before they even touch a patient," he said.

Alfie ambushed with honour

Recovering from a leg injury from Monday's game, Daniel Alfredsson was surprised with an award for his commitment to the community earlier this week.

Media personality Karen Soloman presented the Sens' team captain with the United Way Community Builder Award for 2010 at Scotiabank Place during a practice.

"It's a very nice surprise. I had no idea about this. That's not what you're looking for when you're getting involved in charity,' said Alfredsson of the unexpected announcement.

Alfredsson helped raise over $10.1 million for mental health research, said Soloman, and his involvement in the community will help those struggling with mental illness to speak up and be heard.

"I find being here for a long time now that this is a community that definitely supports each other, and I'm obviously very hon-oured to get this award," said Alfredsson.

Joyful families get set to embrace Chile's miners
 World offers jobs and honours after amazing rescue

Chile's 33 rescued miners were itching to reunite with families and sleep in their own beds Thursday.

But after spending the night in hospital they had to wait — examinations by doctors came first.

Meanwhile, on the day after the 23-hour rescue that kept the world spell-bound, relatives were organizing welcome-home parties — and trying to organize an avalanche of celebrity functions and job offers. Among them:

- ► Spain's Real Madrid football team invited the 33 to attend a game.
 - ▶ A Greek mining company offered to fly each one, with a companion, for a week's vacation in the Mediterranean.

- ▶ Chile's football federation said it would offer a job with its youth teams to Franklin Lobos, a former national team player who drove a taxi to make ends meet before he was caught in the Aug. 5 mine collapse.
- ▶ Soccer teams in Manchester and Buenos Aires want the miners in their stadiums.
- ▶ Bolivia's president wants them at his palace.
- ► TV host Don Francisco wants them all on his popular Sabado Gigante show in Miami.

▶ Hearing that miner Edison Pena jogged regularly in the tunnels below the collapsed rock, the New York City marathon invited him to participate in next month's race.

Doctors said three of the men could be discharged from hospital as early as Thursday evening, with others following Friday and over the weekend. Then they'll have to "find their equilibrium and take care of themselves," said hospital chaplain Rev. Luis Lopez. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tories won't post jobs for strippers, escorts: Finley

▶ McGuinty government opposed to listing such ads on Job Bank: Training Minister John Milloy

The Conservatives say they would kill a proposal to list strippers and escorts on the federal government's Job Bank.

Responding to a Toronto Star story, Human Resources Minister Diane Finley said she has not seen the departmental memo suggesting these occupations should be listed on the Job Bank and would not approve such a policy.

"Our Conservative party has a proud record of standing up for family values and hard-working Canadians and that will not change," Finley said Thursday.

The Star revealed an internal Human Resources department memo proposing that several occupations once considered morally offensive be made "acceptable for posting on Job Bank."

Background

- The draft Oct. 1 memo was written shortly after an Ontario Superior Court judge struck down Canada's prostitution laws. The federal government is appealing the judge's decision.
- ➤ The Job Bank is a free website run by the federal government with the co-operation of the provinces, which post employment openings in their region.

Included in the newly acceptable jobs were: Exotic dancer, erotic dancer, nude dancer, striptease dancer and table dancer, as well as escort, chat-line agent and phone agent for personal services.

Woman on trial for alleged attack on veiled Muslim

A retired French schoolteacher went on trial Thursday on accusations that she attacked a Middle Eastern woman in a Paris shop because the woman wore a face-covering Muslim veil.

The defendant, 63-yearold retired English teacher Jeanne Ruby, is accused of biting, slapping and scratching a woman from the United Arab Emirates and her friend in a home decor shop in Paris.

Ruby was not present in court Thursday and was not represented by a lawyer. 'Zionists will perish,' says Ahmadinejad

• Iranian president taunts Israel from across border in Lebanon • Israeli attack helicopters hover nearby

ed archenemy Israel Thursday from just across the tense border in southern Lebanon where he rallied tens of thousands of supporters of Hezbollah as Israeli attack helicopters buzzed in the skies nearby.

Ahmadinejad, who has repeatedly said Israel should be wiped off the map and denied the Holocaust, vowed that "resistance" forces will liberate Palestinians from Israeli control. The U.S. and Israel called his visit to the border region of southern Lebanon a provocation.

"The world should know that Zionists will perish,' he said at a rally in the village of Bint Jbeil, which was one of the hardest-hit areas in the 2006 Israeli-Hezbollah war. It has since been rebuilt with the help

U.S. keeping Europe terror alert active

A European terrorist plot is still enough of a threat for the U.S. to keep its current travel advisory, the State Department's counterterrorism co-ordinator said Thursday.

Earlier this month, the State Department advised American citizens living or travelling in Europe to take more precautions following reports that terrorists may be plotting attacks, possibly a shooting spree similar to the deadly 2008 attacks in Mumbai.

"We don't (think) the current circumstances warrant rescinding the alert,' said Daniel Benjamin, the U.S. counterterrorism co-ordinator. "We think the situation is pretty much the same." Benjamin insisted the information was credible and had been gathered over several months. Some of the plot details came from Ahmed Siddiqui, a German citizen captured in Afghanistan in July. It wasn't a book club event for your average hockey mom.

Sarah Palin scored the attention of Vancouver's elite at an invitation-only gourmet dinner to discuss her memoir Going Rogue: An American Life.

But the former Alaska governor was missing her usual gaggle of protesters during the visit.

The well-heeled crowd merely ambled past a single demonstrator on the way into the Vancouver Club Ballroom — and his protests weren't even aimed at Palin, but Canada's poor record on Kyoto.

Tory initiative may put needy refugees at risk

• Following arrival of ships carrying Tamil migrants, PM has vowed to deter human smuggling at all costs

For the Conservative govglobal industry of moving people illegally into stable countries is heinous and must be stopped, with tough legislation expected next week.

But for Cristina, human smuggling is a lifeline.

The mother of four from El Salvador is now safe in Ottawa - but only because she hired human smugglers twice to escape violent gangs in her home country, she says.

"If I had stayed, they wouldn't have just killed me. They would have killed my children," the soft-spoken, stoic refugee said in an interview with The Canadi-

The Tories plan to introduce legislation that takes direct aim at smugglers like those who arranged Cristina's passage.

"This government will be coming forward after the parliamentary break, with comprehensive legislation designed to ensure we deter this kind of behav-Prime Minister Stephen Harper said last week, "because I know for the vast majority of Canadians, queue jumping and human smuggling in our immigration system is completely unacceptable."

But finding a way to deter smuggling without inadvertently making things worse for legitimate refugees is almost impossible, experts say.

International research on human smuggling shows that the harsher smuggling countries are on the mid-dlemen, the more expen-sive and more dangerous become their services.

Demand for human smuggling climbs unabat-ed, because desperate people will pay any price. So crackdowns on the smugglers intensify the criminal aspect of the industry, and do little to deter it.

Canada's role

Canadian courts forced Stephen Harper's Conservative government to seek clemency for Ronald Smith last vear after Ottawa initially balked at stepping

- The Canadian government also has the option to make an argument at the clemency hearing. "They certainly as an interested party would have every right to be heard," said Greg Jackson, Smith's lawyer.
- Those appearing at the clemency hearing will have the opportunity to present witnesses, exhibits and testimony.

The fate of the only Canadian on death row in the United States is now in the balance after his final legal avenue of appeal was slammed shut by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The top court has declined to review the case of Ronald Smith of Red Deer, Alta., who was convicted in 1983 for the murder of two young Montana men.

"I'm always optimistic but also it was not unex-pected," said Smith's longtime lawyer Greg Jackson in a phone interview with The Canadian Press.

"I'm concerned for Ron. Obviously I've got to know him well over the past 25 years and in a sense it's like we've grown up together. I care for him deeply and the thought of him being executed — it's sobering."

The case will now be sent to courts in Montana at which time a new execution date for will be set.

Smith was convicted of fatally shooting two cousins, Harvey Madman Jr. fatally and Thomas Running Rabbit, while he was high on drugs and alcohol.

He refused a plea deal that would have seen him avoid death row but spend his life in prison. Three weeks later, he pleaded guilty. He asked for and was given a death sentence.

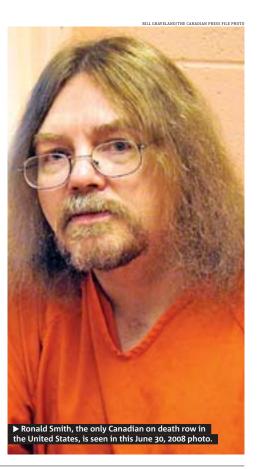

But he later had a change of heart and has been on a legal roller-coaster for the last 25 years. He has already been sentenced to death four times and had the order overturned on three occasions

Once the execution date is set, a petition for clemen-cy will be filed with the Montana Board of Pardons and Parole. A public notice will be issued and a hearing will be held to give both sides a chance to make their arguments.

The board will then issue a recommendation to either grant clemency or re-

Harper blames UN snub on 'secret votes'

● But Canada will stick to the principles it holds dear, he says ● Freedom, justice and human rights are key

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is dismissing Canada's failure to land a seat on the United Nations Security Council as the outcome of "secret votes."

Harper says Canada will stick to promoting values such as freedom, justice and human rights.

"Our engagement internationally is based on the principles that this country holds dear; it is not based on popularity," Harper said.

He was speaking in eastern Quebec two days after Canada withdrew its bid to rejoin the powerful UN Security Council.

Tuesday's setback came gal was on its way to defeating Canada to claim the second of two available spots in the UN's most exclusive and coveted club.

Harper's communications director, Dimitri Soudas, and Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon have said Canada lost out because Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff questioned whether the country had earned a spot on the council.

But the prime minister did not mention Ignatieff.

Harper did not elaborate on what he meant by "secret votes," although Cannon and Soudas did say some of the support that had been anticipated had failed to materialize in the voting.

Canada first joined the Security Council in 1948 and held a seat for a two-year term five more times, most recently in 1999-2000

James' pardon may be revoked

▶ Latest charge sheet against former hockey coach spans from 1979 to 1994
 ▶ New allegations include gross indecency, sexual assault, indecent assault

The mere presence of new criminal allegations against convicted sex offender Graham James means his controversial pardon could be revoked, The Canadian Press has learned.

James, a former junior hockey coach, faces nine new counts of sexually abusing teenage players under his influence over a period that stretched from 1979 into the mid 1990s.

The charge sheet, filed Wednesday in a Winnipeg court, includes allegations from three new complainants, including former NHL star Theoren Fleury. The other two complainants can't be named due to a publication ban.

James, who pleaded

'Good conduct'

The Criminal Records Act authorizes the National Parole Board to revoke a pardon on several grounds, including a subsequent conviction, but also a category indicating "the recipient is no longer of good conduct." The board offers the following guidelines:

 Info about an incident that resulted in a charge that was later withdrawn, guilty to hundreds of assaults on two teenage boys in 1997, was quietly pardoned in 2007.

The pardon — when ex-stayed or dismissed. The relevance of that information increases where the charge or charges are of a serious nature, or are related to the convictions for which the pardon is requested.

- Information from officials about suspected or alleged criminal behaviour.
- With respect to those indicted over a sex offense, any information from law enforcement agencies further to inquiries from the hoard posed by The Canadian Press last spring — caused shock right up to the Prime Minister's Office and led to new legislation to tighten up the pardons system. But James' pardon, which wiped his convictions from the Canadian Police Information Centre database, remained in effect. That may soon change.

Caroline Douglas, communications director for the Parole Board of Canada, said a conviction is not needed to revoke a pardon—the act of laying charges, especially charges similar to the pardoned offence, can spur the board to act.

She stressed she could not discuss any individual case, but said it is not necessary for police or other authorities to request that a pardon be revoked. The board, she said, can act on its OWN. THE CANDIAN PRESS

Theoren Fleury had a hard time getting the words out after learning a Canada-wide warrant was issued for convicted sex offender Graham James.

"I knew it was coming," an emotional Fleury said during a news conference Wednesday. "It's been an interesting day so far because I have all kinds of feelings going through my mind. But I've also pre-pared myself for this day and this moment.'

Fleury's autobiography last year contained new sexual abuse allegations against James, coached Fleury and fellow NHLer Sheldon Kennedy as teens.

"I'm human too. Of course I want to see something happen," Fleury said. "But in the end it has to happen the right way and it has to be well thought out and all the evidence has to be gathered."

Bank of Canada urged shot at to hike interest rates CRTC

The Bank of Canada is being urged to raise interest rates next week for the fourth consecutive time and to keep hiking until next fall.

The surprise recommendation Thursday from a slight majority on a panel of C.D. Howe economists suggests that central bank governor Mark Carney's decision on Oct. 19 may not be as cut and dried as supposed.

The central bank has hiked the policy rate, which influences shortterm interest rates offered by lenders, three times since June to the current one per cent.

We thought we'd seen it all from Wall Street bankers. But foreclosuregate might just set a new record for financial fraud and plunge us all into a brand new crisis.

From 2004 to 2007, the big U.S. banks granted millions of dollars of mortgages. Even a cleaning lady earning $10 an hour could get a $500,000 shanty on credit. The banks were raking it in by regrouping mortgages and reselling them as financial products to investors, like pension plans. Now, when you're trading thousands of mortgages a day, it becomes costly and timeconsuming to visit the notary for each one. The banks therefore created their own computer system (called MERS) to register the sales and pur-

Today, millions of Americans are losing their jobs and must hand over their house keys to banks. There's just one problem:

"Several banks seem to have decided to fabricate false documents."

The MERS registrations contain few details and are worthless in the eyes of several judges who authorize foreclosures. To reclaim the houses, banks must present notarized deeds. Unable to find the original documents - destroyed or lost — several banks seem to have decided to fabricate false documents. And had them authorized by lawyers without scruples (one of whom admitted to authorizing 10,000 in a single month). The result: A total mess from coast to coast. Several banks find themselves trying to repossess the same house, and homeowners are being evicted when they should-

It gets worse. According to a growing number of analysts, if the banks created the MERS system, it wasn't to save a few cents. It was to resell on the sly - to investors like your pension plan — tons of fraudulent mortgages. Without sufficient documentation, the buyers of these products could not accurately verify their quality. We're talking about a major, countrywide fraud.

If the facts — which are still piling up daily — confirm this theory, the big banks will face a mountain of lawsuits. They will also lose their rights to thousands of homes. American financial expert Janet Tavakoli talks about a possible $700-billion bill. İn other words: Bankruptcy for several big banks.

American taxpayers will never agree to bail out bankers yet again. Especially not in this context. Such incompetence, if coupled with criminal intent. deserves only one thing: That those banks be allowed to fail — in an or-derly fashion — for once and for all. Which is what should have happened two years ago.

or how good I am at what I do. It bugs me.

When you have a couple hours to yourself, how do you unwind?

Read. I'd like to read more than I do now ... I'd (also) like to get back into crosscountry skiing. Just more outdoor stuff.

When you and your partner Tom Kennedy (of CTV News) sit down for dinner, is the news discussed all the time? No way (laughing). It's the last thing. And we hardly watch TV, either.

Protect children: Groups

Worth mentioning

Austria should stop detaining children and halt the deportations of well-integrated foreign families that are denied asylum, Amnesty International and three other groups urged Thursday.

The country also should better protect the rights of non-Austrian minors and become more lenient about allowing young asylum seekers and their parents to stay on humanitarian grounds, the organizations wrote in a letter to lawmakers. The appeal comes just days after two eight-yearold twins were taken into custody with their father in an early morning raid and deported back to their native Kosovo. Their mother, who is in psychiatric care, staved behind. The four had lived in Austria since 2004 but were expelled after being denied asylum and refusing to leave on their own. The family's plight has sparked widespread debate and protest, with critics calling the deportations heartless and inhumane. Interior Minister Maria Fekter defended it, saying she was following the rule of law and the children were with their father. She has since softened her stance slightly, acknowledging Wednesday that pictures of the detention "greatly moved her.' THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DO YOU PLAN TO VOTE IN THE UPCOMING MUNICIPAL ELECTION?

Caitlin Kidd

Yes. I think it's important to engage in our democracy and be active citizens.

Lauren Zieminski

No, because I don't have enough time to research it out so I'm not going to make an educated decision. I'm not going to vote for one person just because I feel like it.

A legend returns to musicals "It's a lot of good after 30 years

Although she sang with John Travolta in Grease, danced with Gene Kelly in Xanadu and recently fea-tured her hit Let's Get Physical on Glee, Olivia Newton-John hasn't appeared in a full-on musical on the big screen for 30 years. That will change this weekend when she will be seen playing an overprotective hockey mom in Score: A Hockey Musical.

Shooting in Toronto in frigid February temperatures, she says, was "an experience," but the working with the cast and crew made it worthwhile. "My memory of the movie was having fun," she adds. Working with her friend Jordan, who is best known as a solo singersongwriter (he wrote the hit Rhythm of My Heart for Rod Stewart), caused to her to occasionally get the giggles so badly she could barely contain herself.

NORTON'S IMPRESSIVE CRIMINAL RESUMÉ

has made a career of playing iailbirds on screen. His edgy intensity lights up movies like this weekend's Stone, despite one writer calling him "the passport definition of no distinguishing marks." The Yale graduate's slight, gawky frame is not exactly what you have in mind when you think criminal and yet his portrayals of peo-ple on life's fringe's have earned him Oscar nominations and come to define his career.

In his first big screen part Norton played the dual role of altar boy Aaron and his alter ego, the psychotic Roy in the film Primal Fear. Accused of murder, he is zealously defended by a defense attorney (Richard Gere) who is drawn to the sweet Southern boy until he realizes that Aaron is totally insane. A complete unknown when he auditioned for the role, he tricked the film's director into thinking he shared an eastern Kentucky background with Aaron by speaking with a twang — which he picked by watching Coal Miner's Daughter.

"The most I had to offer was anonymity," he later said. "The potency of the revelation about who my character really was in that film was in part reliant on the fact that people had absolutely no prior knowledge of me."

Next time behind bars he pulled a De Niro, and in American History X physically transformed to play the role of a white supremacist sent away for murder. In jail he learns the error of his ways and works to help his brother from going down the same, wrong-headed path. "I knew this guy was going to have to be really physically fearsome," he says, "and that's not something anyone would peg me for. [He's] defined by rage and this body he's created is the physical manifestation of that."

In this weekend's Stone he stars as an arsonist who will do anything, including using his wife as bait, to earn parole. Despite having played convicts in the past, Norton was keen to bring an extra layer of realism to this role so he met with actual prisoners to learn how they spoke.

how they spoke.

"Their language is fantastic. At one point, one of these guys was telling me about a fight and how he had to just let it happen and not fight. (He said.)

"When you're short time, you have to be a vegetarian.' I said, 'What?' He said, 'Vegetarian, you can't have beef with nobody.'"

Best Eastwood flicks

take over this week because ... well, because he's Clint Eastwood. What are you gonna do, say no to the man?

Actually, Eastwood was kind enough to take a few moments to select his five favourite movies from the dozens he's directed; his latest. Hereafter starin Matt Damon, opens this weekend.

But because we're feeling so charitable, we let him pick six, listed below along with his comments and insights.

THE ACCOUNTED DEEC

MILLION DOLLAR BABY 2004

Starring Hilary Swank as a boxer and Eastwood as her reluctant trainer: "It appealed to me because it was a story regarding fami-- a search for the daughter he never had a relationship with, and the search for the father that was no longer there for her. They were both sort of reticent, and ended up putting themselves through the most emotional test possible, ending with her desire to be euthanized."

LETTERS FROM IWO JIMA 2006

One of two Second World War films Eastwood released in 2006: "I was proud of Letters from Iwo Jima. I got the idea of doing it while doing Flags of Our Fathers, which is about the American invasion of the island. But the film pointed out what it must have been like to have been one of the defenders of the island to have been there, and been told not to plan on returning home. What a difficult request to make of people. Also, the Japanese soldiers were facing certain annihilation. They never gave up hope. A lot of them would have loved to have been out of the war and home, just like soldiers from any nation."

THE OUTLAW JOSEY WALES 1976

Starring Eastwood as a Missouri farmer out for revenge after the Civil War: "It was the first Western I had done in some time since the 1960s Leone movies. It came out in the '70s when the country was restless about Vietnam. It addressed the divisiveness of war, and how it can tear at heart and soul. But it also dealt with the rejuvenation of a cynic, re-instilling his life with purpose, and with a surrogate family."

UNFORGIVEN 1992

Eastwood as a retired gunslinger taking on one last job: "I loved the Unforgiven script. You had to get a ways into it before you knew who was the protagonist and who was the antagonist. Even the villains, with the exceptions of the renegade cowboys, had good points to their character, and had dreams. Little Bill (played by Gene Hackman) just wanted a peaceful life. He believed he was doing the right thing. The film dealt with issues - gun control, and the struggles people have "within." The hero went against instinct. It was a very rich story, involving lovalty to friends, family and rationalizing deeds. It was a very intelligent script."

BIRD 1988

A biopic on jazz legend Charlie Parker: "It was a nice story about someone whose musicianship I admired so greatly. It was a good script on the analysis of the self-destructiveness of personality: people who insist on sinking into the abyss. Success, being idolized by other musicians—none of it was enough."

MYSTIC RIVER

▶ About childhood friends reunited by tragedy in an insular part of Boston: "I liked the book and the screenplay by Brian Helgeland. The way sometimes fate deals a bad hand, and it just keeps getting worse and worse, and there is nothing anyone can do. No amount of sane advice can stop the train."

Movie review

Worth watching See it twice Yawn ⊕⊕ | Don't bother ee it now 🏻

Red's great cast brings plenty of fun

Red

Genre: Action/Comedy Director: Robert Schwentke Stars: Bruce Willis, Morgan Freeman, John Malkovich, Helen Mirren, Morgan Freeman

There's a moment in the first half of Red, Bruce Willis' delightful new shoot-em-up, when the chaos on screen reaches a fevered, frenzied high point as retired CIA agents Frank (Willis) and loose cannon Marvin (John Malkovich) dance their way through a fire fight in a Louisiana shipyard, ending with a ludicrous showdown involving a rocket launcher. It's 100 per cent pure fun. Unfortunately, the movie can't keep up the frenetic pace after that and soon has to stop and catch its breath, as if the film itself were one of the retirees it features.

Whatever points Red loses for slowing its pace, it more than makes up for the with the introduction of perhaps its biggest selling point: Dame Helen Mirren with an assault rifle. As a former British agent now taken to gardening, Mirren is obviously enjoying herself here, as is the rest of the cast. And despite the fact that Willis and Marv-Louise Parker are the focus, Mirren's relationship with an ex-KGB agent (Brian Cox) is the real heart of the

The only problem with Red, really, is that Willis, at 55, just doesn't look like an old man, which is probably exactly what the actor wants you to think. O NED EHRBAR gimmicks. I don't need to be immersed in Pandora; I want stuff flung at me from the screen.

Johnny Knoxville and Co., who are constantly outdoing themselves with crazy and creative pranks and stunts, would seem to be just the right guys to do that sort of thing. But very little occurs in their latest movie, Jackass 3D, that are shocked when it's revealed the trio was actually raised in a mysterious boarding school for organ donors. Never Let Me Go wraps a tale of love around the moody, ominous moral horror. It's all about atmos-phere and Mark Romanek (One Hour Photo) manages to capture a stunning looker while Carey Mulligan and Keira Knightley deliver the goods ... so to speak.

Never Let Me Go Genre: Drama Director: Mark Romanek Stars: Carey Mulligan, Keira Knightley Based on an acclaimed novel by Kazuo Ishiguro, Never Let Me Go at first seems like a romantic period piece. However, audiences

It's Kind Of A Funny Story Genre: Dark Comedy Directors: Anna Boden, Ryan

Stars: Zach Galifianakis, Keir Gilchrist, Emma Roberts

It's Kind Of A Funny Story should be a dark comedy combining the voices of cult comic Zach Galifianakis and the directors of Half Nelson. To an extent it is, albeit on the sidelines. Galifianakis creates a touching and hilarious portrait of a lifelong depressive, but unfortunately the film focuses on a suicidal teen learning how crazy the world is during a week-long stay in a psyche ward. The film works reasonably well. even if there's no denying that a far more interesting movie is going on in the background. OPHIL BROWN

Stone Genre: Drama Director: John Curran Stars: Robert De Niro, Edward Norton, Mila Jovovich

Stone is a muddled, but intriguing prison drama about a burned out corrections officer, a manipulative con with a conscience, and his femme fataleesque wife desperate to get a release. This movie should have been a smart dirty thriller, but is teased out into an almost theological think piece by director John Curran. The approach works wonders for the cast, with DeNiro giving a thoughtful if somewhat lazy performance. OPHIL BROWN

Waiting for "Superman" Genre: Documentary Director: Davis Guggenheim Star: Geoffrey Canada In 2006, Davis

Guggenheim's An Inconvenient Truth not only won the Best Documentary Oscar but it helped an entire generation understand and start thinking about environmental change. Now the filmmaker hopes Waiting for "Superman" has the same effect on a deplorable American school system that has been reduced to forcing some children to literally play lotteries for spots in decent learning facilities. Like An Inconvenient

Truth, the film is a heavy mix of stats and information but with the charismatic personalities of school reformer Geoffrey Canada and the five innocent children that Guggenheim follows through to their fateful lottery day, the message is clear

A STEVE GOW

Jackass 3D Genre: Comedy Director: Jeff Tremaine Stars: Johnny Knoxville, Bam Margera, Steve-O Three-D would seem

tailor-made for the guys from Jackass.

When the technology is used for its funniest and most entertaining purpos es, as it was recently in Piranha 3-D," it's all about the wild, gratuitous wouldn't have sufficed in 2-D. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Since then, the standard

AM radio grew to include FM, 8-tracks, cassettes, CDs and six- and 10-pack changers and satellite radio with many featuring displays that looked like they were designed by a Las Vegas casino. Mono became stereo. Four speakers became six, then eight, then 12 then ... well, you know.

But all this is nothing compared to the revolution in automobile entertainment systems that's just starting to hit.

Consider this: Up to 25 per cent of smart phone/MP3 users already connect their devices to their car speakers. Given how awkward this process can be (FM transmitters, ugly cable connections), this is astounding. One in four!

Police got unexpected help talking a suicidal man down from an Atlanta skyscraper on Wednesday when rapper T.I. showed Officer James Polite says the hip-hop star joined the crowd outside the 22-story office building in midtown Wednesday and told officers he wanted to help. Police said the man agreed to come down in exchange for a few minutes face-to-face with T.I.

"I told him it ain't that bad. It'll get better, to put the time and effort into making it better," T.I. said.
"I just reminded him know that I know. It looks bad right now, but it can turn around."

T.I. said he heard about the situation on the radio and drove to the building to help. He recorded a video of himself on a cellphone and rescue workers took it to the man to prove the rapper was really there.

The good deed follows recent legal trouble for the rapper, who is due in court Friday for a parole hearing after being arrested on suspicion of drug offences last month in Los Angeles.

He's on supervised release after spending a year in prison on weapons charges. federal

Jonas bros cancel concert in Mexico

Disney stars the Jonas Brothers have cancelled a concert scheduled in the Mexican city of Monterrey because of security concerns.

Concert promoter Live Nation says the Oct. 21 concert was cancelled due to "a series of unfortunate events" in Monterrey and out of concern for fans.

Monterrey is Mexico's richest city and one of its safest, but a wave of drug violence has shocked residents. More than 400 people have been killed this year in the state of Nuevo Leon, where Monterrey is located.

One fan, Dharyus Ledezma begged the trio on their Facebook page to announce a new concert date. The Monterrey resident said she had been looking forward to seeing them since the show was announced five months ago. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Darius Rucker's album Charleston, SC 1966, debuts this week Hootie and the Blowfish mark their 25th anniversary

Darius Rucker has spent the last few years reinvent-ing himself as a country star. He's had a platinum debut, No. 1 hits and his follow-up, Charleston, SC 1966, debuted this week.

Rucker hasn't forgotten what made him one of music's most bankable voices, though.

Hootie & the Blowfish celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

Rucker said the band never really broke up though they haven't recorded together since releasing Looking For Lucky in 2005

They play together occasionally, including four dates this year, and bandmates see each other often. Rucker says the chemistry that helped them sell more than 25 million records remains strong.

"We could get together right now and have an album for you in three months," Rucker said. "We're all writing all the time. I was sitting down writing songs (recently) and I wrote a country song and then a song came out that sounded like Hootie, so I saved it for that."

Rucker's solo country turn has turned in to quite a run. His first country album, 2008's Learn To Live spawned three No. 1 songs, sold about 1.5 million copies and earned him a Country Music Association Award for best new artist.

Rucker's second act as a country music star is no surprise to Hootie guitarist Mark Bryan. He's been lis-tening to his friend belt out country tunes since they met in 1985 when Bryan heard Rucker singing in the shower of their University of South Carolina dorm hall.

"The very first show Darius and I did together at Pappy's with an acoustic guitar, we did Family Tradition by Hank Williams Jr., which he's still doing in his solo country

Bryan said.

After a few months, Rucker and Bryan decided to go for it and enlisted bassist Dean Felber and a drummer, Felber, who had played in a band with Bryan during high school, didn't really want to join but he said he'd fill in till they could find a permanent bassist.

"And it's amazing 25 years after asking Dean to play with us, we're still looking for a bass player and we're still in a band. That's pretty awesome,' Rucker said.

Friends will celebrate Hootie & The Blowfish's 25th anniversary with a concert and art installation unveiling in Columbia on Thursday. It will be a cherished memory for Rucker, who admits many of his memories from the Hootie years are a "blur."

"We had just taken college and extended it a few years," he said. "Our tour was a travelling party every day. Every day, all are still together and will record another album at some point.

day. I look back and I laugh, people will ask me things and they'll say things, and I'll say, 'I don't remember that." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Does (Bleep) stink?

▶ Ratings imply trouble for Twitter-to-TV sitcom ▶ Creator Halpern remains confident

Justin Halpern knows that not everyone is supportive of a guy fortunate enough to turn a Twitter feed into a bestselling book and a prime-time network sitcom.

His good luck instantly breeds hostility, he says, "and it's kind of a justified feeling because it's just a Twitter page."

Hits on the Web haven't typically transferred well to TV (see quarterlife), but Halpern might be an ex-

His Twitter feed, S- Mv Dad Says, amassed a huge following (now more than 1.7 million followers) simply by quotes he relayed from his 74-year-old father, Sam Halpern, a classic curmudgeon with a penchant for expletives.

His similarly titled book debuted on The New York Times list of bestsellers. Then, the CBS sitcom starring William Shatner as Halpern's father premiered to 12.5 million viewers, more than twice that of 30 Rock.

Ratings for (Bleep) My Dad Says (the Twitter feed's title was changed for the CBS show) have since declined each week and reviews have been bad. But the show hopes it has cast off its novelty label and become one of the few Internet-to-TV success stories.

It hasn't been a smooth ride. The pilot, produced by Warner Bros., had to be reshot, and the part of the son was recast Jonathan Sadowski. with

The changes may have improved things, but critics were still unimpressed. The New York Times, for one, called it "a bad idea from the moment it was announced" and "a wholly generic sitcom so divorced from its source material that you have to pinch yourself."

The show is oddly oldschool in its reliance on sitcom tradition. But to a certain extent, the Twitter feed that started it all was classically sitcomish: There's no more familiar TV trope than the crabby father.

One of the ingredients that set Halpern's Twitter feed apart was its vulgarity. His father's musings and advice are harsh. One of few examples without an offensive word: "Pressure? Get married when you want. Your wedding's just one more day in my life I can't wear sweat Halpern ended up living with his parents in San Diego after he got a job with Maxim.com and his girlfriend unexpectedly dumped him. In the book, he fleshes out the details of his life and his relationship with his dad, whom he describes as "the least passive-aggressive human being on the planet.

He started the Twitter account as a lark at the suggestion of a friend.

Thad no idea what to expect," he says. "It was just funny to tell my friends, 'Look at all these people that follow what my dad says."

Executive producers David Kohan and Max Mutchnick, creators of Will & Grace, were brought in to run the show. Halpern is a co-executive producer and writer.

The most notable change in the adaptation was sanitizing the vulgarity. The character based on Halpern, too, was turned from merely a bemused onlooker into a son craving love and sympathy from his father.

Senators score their first win

Leclaire hurt in first period, replaced in net by Elliott

SENATORS

HURRICANES

Mike Fisher scored twice, including the winner in the third, as the Ottawa Senators got their first victory of the season Thursday, 3-2 over the Carolina Hurricanes.

With Ottawa enjoying a four-minute power play, Fisher took a feed in the high slot from Nick Foligno and ripped a slapshot past Carolina netminder Cam Ward for his second of the night.

It was the first goal of the season on the man advantage for Ottawa (1-2-1). Milan Michalek also scored for the Senators, while Brian Elliott made 19 saves in his first appearance of the season after coming on for injured Otstarter Pascal tawa Leclaire.

Sergei Samsonov and Eric Staal had the goals for the Hurricanes (2-1-0), who were playing their first game in North America after starting the season in Europe with a two-game series with Minnesota.

Things didn't start well for the Senators as Leclaire left the game after two minutes of action following successive collisions with Carolina's Jeff Skinner and Tom Kostop-

The 27-year-old left the game with a lower body injury and was replaced by Elliott, who hadn't played since the pre-season.

Ottawa came strong early and led after one period for the first time this season.

Fisher opened the scoring with just more than two minutes remaining as his shot from the point deflected into the air and slipped past Ward, who finished with 36 saves.

Ottawa had a number of chances in the second, but Ward was at his best until midway through the period when Michalek beat him with a backhand off the rush.

The Hurricanes tied the game with two goals in less than two minutes midway through the third Samsonov scored on the power play after Elliott overcommitted to Staal and was unable to get back in position.

Staal then picked up his first of the season after taking a cross-ice pass to knot the score 2-2.

Why live in pain?

CANADIAN PAIN CLINICS NOW ACCEPTING NEW PATIENTS

A MULTIMODAL APPROACH TO PAIN RELIEF

A highly regarded and successful clinic for the treatments of acute and chronic neuromuscular complaints, the Canadian Pain Clinics, is continuing to help people around the Ottawa area. This integrative treatment facility is attaining results from their multidisciplinary approach and the success rate has been high in these clinics. The clinic's unique treatment approach uses a combination of manual treatments, rehabilitative exercises, technologically advanced laser therapy and other state of the art modalities that results in adhesion free muscles, improved nerve function, increase mobility and reduced pain.

THE GRASTON TECHNIQUE

At the core of these treatments is the Graston technique. It is a soft tissue technique that is designed to mobilize, reduce and reorganize the fibrotic restrictions in the neuro-musculoskeletal system. The technique is delivered through the use of six hand held stainless steel instruments. A specifically designed ointment is applied to the skin prior to using the instruments so that the instruments glide over the skin without causing irritation. The treatment is applied in multiple directions: with venous drainage, against venous drainage and cross fibre in multiple directions to the lesion. The treatment application is also part of the diagnostic process. As the instruments are applied, a "vibratory" sensation is felt through the instruments to the doctor's fingertips. The patient simultaneously experiences a similar feeling while the tool traverses the area being treated. The Graston Technique Instruments are used to enhance the clinician's ability to detect adhesions, scar tissue or restrictions in the affected areas. Skilled clinicians use the stainless steel instruments to comb over and "catch" on fibrotic tissue, which immediately identifies the areas of restriction.

PAIN: HOW IS IT TREATED?

Patients suffering from acute and chronic pain conditions often have seen different doctors, practitioners, and have undergone many different therapies. They suffer from physical pain, and they also have a chemical and psychological component to their pain, which are often overlooked by other pain-relief facilities

Pain relief and restoration of functioning are attained for such conditions as: neck pain, upper and lower back pain, headaches, carpal tunnel syndrome, frozen shoulder, thoracic outlet syndrome (numbness and tingling of the arm and hand), tendonitis (tennis and golfers elbow), plantar fasciitis (pain on the bottom of the foot), sports injuries, whiplash, sciatica (pain in the buttock and back of the leg), arthritis, torticollis (wry neck), fibromyalgia, spinal stenosis, acute sprain and strain injuries as well as the soft tissue component of almost any condition involving muscles, tendons, nerves and joints.

Many patients deemed as potential surgical candidates have also avoided or prolonged the need for surgery with the treatment approach the clinic uses. The reality is that most people wait too long and their conditions worsen leading to increased suffering from pain.
